

Recovery Community Centres

Community-Based Recovery Resource

What is an RCC?

Recovery Community Centres (RCCs) offer welcoming, community-based support beyond the clinical setting for people in recovery. Each centre is a little different, but services may include peer support, mutual aid meetings, phone support, recovery coaching, social activities, healthy living groups, life skills, and help finding recovery resources.

The backbone of the RCC is its volunteers from the recovery community, who instill hope, role-model recovery, and help dispel stigma.

Core Commitments

- Create safe, supportive spaces for peers and volunteers to contribute meaningfully to their communities.
- Offer recovery and wellness workshops, connect individuals to vital resources, housing, employment, legal aid, and healthcare, and provide support through relapses and challenges.
- Promote mutual care, accountability, and long-term recovery.
- Foster a people-centered, strengths-based, inclusive approach that honors diverse recovery pathways.
- Advance public understanding of recovery as a lifelong journey and advocate for supportive policy change.
